"We have received an early copy of this work, which is now in press sed will she rily be published. For this book we hesitate not to predict an unusual success. The volume is a power-ful production, and will create an excitement in literary circles. Like 'Jane Eyre,' this book is not dependent upon a hand-some heroine for its chief charm; and it is not improbable that "Mary Lyndon' may achieve a success equal to that."

"Its worth is so large, its original features and individuality of character are so striking, that we expect to hear it laughed at and loved, admired and abused, more than any work unbillehed for many seasons. The book is not one which will be read to-day and forgotten to-morrow. It will do somewhat toward molding the career of thinking men and wemen in the next generation. This is not allow, as it is not undeserved, prince."

"A work of no ordinary interest and power from the pen of a remarkably gitted female writer. It is destined to make a powerful impression and create a profund sensation. The story is one of great interest—the analycit, women's wrongs. The characters and incidents are drawn from real life and are depicted with a power of delineation of the most vivid interestees."
